Aurélia and Other Writings by Gérard de Nerval

Aurélia is French poet and novelist Gérard de Nerval's account of his descent into madness—a condition provoked in part by his unrequited passion for an actress named Jenny Colon. One of the original self-styled "bohemians," Nerval was best known in his own day for parading a lobster on a pale blue ribbon through the gardens of the Palais-Royal, and was posthumously notorious for his suicide in 1855, hanging from an apron string he called the garter of the Queen of Sheba.

Aurelia And Other Writings Gerard De Nerval

I first read Nerval about ten years ago in the Richard Sieburth edition from Penguin: I was on my way to reading Proust, and "Sylvie" is a natural stop along that way. I like the Sieburth Nerval; but one wonders what other Nervals might sound like. The Exact Change book is one that I'm constantly picking up in bookstores - one always hopes that by mistake one might discover something ...

Gérard de Nerval is the pen name of French Romantic poet and author Gérard Labrunie, who was born in Paris. He was the son of an army doctor and was raised by his great-uncle in the Mortefontaine countryside while his parents traveled to the front. His mother died when he was two years old. In 1828, Labrunie published a widely praised translation of Goethe's Faust.
